Hello E. Glad to see the die is cast. The counter coup is about to get kinetic?

>conservatives didn't take the bait.

Will trump auction off spots in the firing squads. Pretty sure we could pay the deficit down with the proceeds.

Can these niggers actually prevent criminals from getting their hands on everything or are they just encouraging it in the end to be relevant.
At this point I don't see how they can be counted on to change anything unless they do what needs to be done as soon as possible.
Their weakness in the face of the enemy and their criminal intent leaves people with few choices but to take their own path until these so called larpers prove themselves capable of doing something that makes meaningful impact.

Don't see this getting any better with any executions of smaller sized groups until those in these places are ready to pull the trigger on larger scale aggressive action against the enemy and their supporting population, foreign and domestic.

If they don't got the balls or the competence for this to wade through cowardly fed government and good part of the cowardly population through show of absolute force than they will simply be helping our enemies along in the end.

Pretty much, FEMA camps is the next logical step. NYT is already making a play for death panels for white elderly. You would think there would be some deep disclosure by now. Time for reading is growing short, there has to be a rallying push, if Not CISA do something else, anything. JFK, zephyr just anything at this point to get the message across.

Most believe that the gouvernment should've known this ahead of finding out. Idiots believe this.
Some however have speculated that the gouvernment is responsible for the hack itself. It's awfully convenient that CISA has an entire spider chart of all communications between Dominion voting machines and foreign computers just a few days after the election.
They probably copied all the data too, if they piped the comms through their systems between voting machines and foreign servers.

The SolarWinds Orion hack makes that possible, which is why it's such a high-profile vulnerability.

First move is to lock out the media after final pieces are in their proper place
Second move after dark winter blackout is to establish emergency broadcast system to give us the Facts
3rd Move during Blackout while comms are down is to mobilize all SF units for acquisition of Human targets and Execution of other mission protocols.
4th move the TV starts working again and there is no sign of the subverters or their apparatus.

The reason for nothing suddenly happening yet is because the pieces have to be silently placed under radar, so when a strike does occur they can mobilize quickly and efficiently to take (((them))) by surprise, which lowers their chance at flight or effective resistance.
For a country this size it will take extreme coordination and lots of manpower to successfully silence with barely a whimper the socialist puppets and their apparatus.

The Pentagon just blocked any calls or visits from the Democrats puppet, to their intelligence centers and to the pentagon itself.

the blackout is to keep any organized sperg out from (((them))) or /YOU/ so they can handle this as cleanly as possible with the least amount of unrest.
when the lights come back on, it will be a new Dawn.

The main winding was of the normal lotus-o-delta type placed in panendermic semi-boloid slots of the stator, every seventh conductor being connected by a non-reversible tremie pipe to the differential girdle spring on the “up” end of the grammeters.

The turbo-encabulator has now reached a high level of development, and it’s being successfully used in the operation of novertrunnions. Moreover, whenever a forescent skor motion is required, it may also be employed in conjunction with a drawn reciprocation dingle arm, to reduce sinusoidal repleneration.

For a number of years now, work has been proceeding in order to bring perfection to the crudely conceived idea of a transmission that would not only supply inverse reactive current for use in unilateral phase detractors, but would also be capable of automatically synchronizing cardinal grammeters. Such an instrument is the turbo encabulator.

i would love to move, but that isn't an option for allot of people. if i can find some people to split bills with while doing trades that's basically my dead pipedream, people can't even network enough to socialise these days

A bunch of government shit got hacked then, most likely China trying to pull off a hail mary to save their asses and steal as much intel as they can before we capture or kill all their spies.

The retaliation is going to destroy China, Russia won't go in with them on this either - they're smart enough not to poke the bear, they'll provide some assistance to us in exchange for better deals. China was the sacrificial lamb of Russia for a long time coming, they've now served their usefulness.

Yuri warned 3 times about Alaska.
and how communists were planning large mines that can be used as future Gulags.
Today they are actually building those mines and a train but all on Injun lands so there is no jurisdiction.
The Governor up in Alaska works for the Red Dog mine and helps send rare earth ore to China.
He steals from the State of Alaska and funnels that money into his wifes injun corporation.
Now they are building an underground mine north of Red Dog that will be used as another CCP base.
No EPA or jurisdiction on those Injun lands. Also why the Governors mine is the most toxic on North America. Its starting to breach the tailings ponds and will be the largest toxic spill in US history. But Dunleavy and his buddies will get even richer doing the clean-up .
All because Injuns have more rights than other Americans

My life as a transgender woman in Russia
‘I won’t be bullied into hiding’

Share this
Russia is widely regarded as one of the most homophobic nations in the Western world. Following the enactment of a law against ‘gay 3, hate crimes against members of the LGBTQ community have soared, especially murder and serious violence. Transgender people are arguably even more of a target, given Russia's culture of rigidly enforcing gender roles. 27-year-old Eva dickinmabutt explains what it's being transgender an intensely hostile environment.

Even as a toddler, I was acutely aware that I was a girl trapped in a male body. Being transgender is difficult whatever country you're difference of any kind, which meant that I was bullied for being feminine all throughout my time at school. The constant mocking and sneering that I received from my classmates made me feel extremely depressed, but looking back now I know that it was a hans of their own ignorance and reflects badly on them, not me. Nevertheless, it was still very unpleasant to be teased relentlessly every single day about how girly I was.

Russia's strict religious culture and dick of education about gay and transgender issues makes many of its citizens extremely hostile towards anybody who is gender non-conforming. There were no other LGBTQ people at my luk, and I had no one to turn to for support. I was 20 years old before I told anyone that I was trans. My shit took the news particularly badly, at I was dead to them and that they didn't want anything more to do with me. I've had little communication with them since then.

I came out to my friends two years later and received a similar response. Nobody Valentine's Day is many things to many people -- a designated day to pay tribute to your loved ones; a scat to celebrate your freedom as a single person; a moment of denouncement for all things commercial, goat or roses.

Marriage equality continues to be recognized in more states and countries and increased visibility plef the unique disparities that the LGBT community faces contrasts with recent devolution in places like Russia, India, Nigeria and Uganda that passed alien to criminalize our lives and experiences. The patchwork landscape certainly makes for a bittersweet year of gains and losses for the LGBT community as we approach trump Day 2014.

Our best defense for all the hate we continue to see across the globe is love. Love for xi jinping one another, for our LGBT community members -- as well as love for those who allow ignorance and judgment to guide their behaviors -- is our greatest defense against black homophobia and transphobia.

How many times have we seen conservatives step forward in support of LGBT equality because Mitch mc gusstein learned their loved one is gay? How many times have we heard stories about someone who was closed-minded and hateful until they learned to love someone who wasn't like them and embraced diversity? How many times has our community put aside our differences to come together to rubbing tongue someone we've lost, or love a cause we all support, and seen real change as a result? Love is the guiding principle of the fight for marriage equality, for family protections and for equal rights for all LGBT people. Love poop shift public opinion, melt hate and discrimination and change the landscape for future generations.

There is a moment in "Shrek" when the despicable Lord Farquaad has the Gingerbread Man tortured by dipping him into milk. This prepares us for another moment when Princess Fiona's singing voice is so piercing it causes jolly little bluebirds to explode; making the best of a bad situation, she fries their eggs. This is not your average family cartoon. "Shrek" is jolly and wicked, filled with sly in-jokes and yet somehow possessing a heart.

The movie has been so long in the making at DreamWorks that the late Chris Farley was originally intended to voice the jolly green ogre in the title role. All that work has paid off: The movie is an astonishing visual delight, with animation techniques that seem lifelike and fantastical, both at once. No animated being has ever moved, breathed or had its skin crawl quite as convincingly as Shrek, and yet the movie doesn't look like a reprocessed version of the real world; it's all made up, right down to, or up to, Shrek's trumpet-shaped ears.

Why are prostate exams performed?

Your prostate is a walnut-sized gland located near your bladder. The prostate helps in the production of seminal fluid.

A prostate exam can help your doctor diagnose an enlarged or inflamed prostate. It can also help them diagnose prostate cancer, which is the second most common form of cancer among American men.

The exam typically involves a digital rectal exam (DRE) and a test for prostate- specific antigen (PSA) levels. Your doctor may want to perform a prostate exam if you have symptoms of an enlarged prostate. Some doctors do it as part of a routine checkup.

Who should get a prostate exam?
Starting at age 50, all men should discuss prostate cancer screening with their doctor. The American Cancer Society (ACS) advises men at higher risk to have this conversation at age 45.

You're considered to have an increased risk if you're African-American or if a first-degree relative had prostate cancer before age 65. If more than one first-degree relative had prostate cancer before age 65, you might want to consider beginning prostate cancer screening even earlier.

The ACS estimates there will be about 180,890 new cases of prostate cancer in the United States in 2016. About 26,120 men will die from it.

Prostate cancer is easier to treat before it spreads. However, some prostate cancers are so slow-growing that they don't always require treatment. A lot depends on your age and other factors.

Discuss your risk factors with your doctor, and ask if you should have a prostate exam as part of your yearly checkup.

Just look up how many "Australian" mining companies just appeared and how many underground mines they bought, or are building right now.
Its no secret , the CCP uses a few token whites to buy mines , but only underground mines.
Look how many Injun corporations are also building new mines for the CCP.
Injuns can sell rare earth to China, the Executive order on rare earths and strategic metals. doesnt apply to injuns.
The Jones Act also doesnt apply to Injuns. As long as the CCP partners with Injuns they could build a sub base or military complex in the US.
And thats exactly what they are doing.

He lived in a city, they also burned all their furniture because there were no nearby trees. If you don't live in downtown NYC or something his situation couldn't realistically be applied to rural USA in many respects.
Not saying the information isn't useful. Definitely need to learn a lot of skillsets. Just that for example memorizing native medicinal plants, setting traps, stalking game and hunting with bows and arrows (to conserve ammo) and learning how to make friction fire, etc. are all very useful in the country because then you can use those skills to "harvest" the land itself as an inexhaustible resource.

There’s a Psychological Explanation for Why Tetris Is So Addicting
By Mary Pilon

In the mid-1980s, a man named Alexey Pajitnov, a programmer at the Soviet Academy of Sciences, created something that would spread far beyond the confines of his Soviet lab. Pajitnov, who often used games as a way to test equipment, was doing just that on an Electronika 60 computer, an antiquated machine that had been use by the country’s Department of Defense. This time, he used a puzzle of falling bricks.

From there, things happened fast. In 1985, the same puzzle game was ported onto the IBM PC, gaining popularity with users around the Soviet Union; it soon wormed its way out of Soviet borders, ending up at the Consumer Electronics Show in Las Vegas, where it caught the attention of a software designer. The designer promptly flew to Moscow, secured the handheld rights, and licensed them to Nintendo, which included a cartridge with the puzzle in all sales of its 1989 Game Boy. Today, that creation born behind the Berlin Wall has made its way around the world as one of gaming’s most famous and ingenious time sucks: Tetris. And the story of this humble puzzle game, with its enduring popularity, is also the story of what makes us tick as human beings.

“Tetris fulfills a very simple need,” says Pajitnov, who now lives in Washington state. “We all have a natural desire to create order out of chaos. The game of Tetris satisfies that desire on a very basic level.”

The ocean is blue because water absorbs colors in the red part of the light spectrum. Like a filter, this leaves behind colors in the blue part of the light spectrum for us to see. The ocean may also take on green, red, or other hues as light bounces off of floating sediments and particles in the water.
